Dear Brother/Sister:

Re: April 28th National Day of Mourning

Each year hundreds of workers are killed and thousands more are permanently disabled or die from work related diseases and accidents. Their loss is felt every day at work by co-workers, at home by loved ones and within our community by neighbors and friends. April 28th is recognized in Canada as a National Day of Mourning for our Sisters and Brothers who have lost their lives on the job.

On this date we must take a moment to remember our Sisters and Brothers who will never see their families again and also those who will never return to work because of injuries and illness suffered in the workplace.

April 28th has become a day to commemorate the lives lost, and also an opportunity to rededicate our commitment to improve health and safety standards and practices on the job. I encourage you to be involved in activities that may be taking place in your area to commemorate this day.

In Solidarity,
